

Newsletter Sept 09

"It's Launched; and this is just the beginning...."

Introduction – Colin Loag, Managing Director

August 31st 2009. AutoSpec went live a little later than planned, but it's significantly better than we'd ever anticipated at the start of the project two years ago.

Getting AutoSpec to this point has been a mammoth task, but with the support shown by the specifying profession and those manufacturing organisations already involved, we have together created the benchmark in automated specifying.

September is to be a Beta testing month for fine tuning and minor adjustments. You can use the system, however we would recommend that this month is best spent familiarising yourself with it.

Have a look at the product libraries, their content and the simple specification writing prompt process.

October will see the system "signed off" and contract specifications can be produced from that point onwards.

Manufacturer Libraries displayed on September BETA test version: 25

Product Ranges by the end of September BETA period: 104

Specification Permutations:
758,030

New Manufacturers Libraries being authored: 15

New Product ranges: 59

What Now? Expect to see the content of AutoSpec grow significantly.

The initial Libraries have many more product ranges to be added over the coming weeks.

We are working with new manufacturers so have a look at the site on a regular basis to see who else has come on-board.

As a quick reference, the logos of all participating manufacturers published or under construction, are visible on our home page.

Additional functions are being completed, and we'll announce their arrival as they come on line.
